Taking proper care of a living symbol

by Capt. Joseph Ringer
15th Security Forces Squadron,
Operations Flight commander

HICKAM AIR FORCE BASE — Few organizations and communities can match the depth of national pride seen on Hickam Air Force Base. This is especially true concerning display of the Stars and Stripes; and I'm not only referring to the base and numerous ceremonial flags which dot the base's landscape, but also numerous smaller flags adorning the homes of the men and women who have sworn to protect and defend the ideals for which it stands. This tribute, while serving as a reminder of the promise of our great nation, as well as our own personal sacrifice, must be properly maintained so as not to diminish its intended patriotic purpose.

Section 8j of the U.S. Flag Code states, "The flag represents a living country and is itself considered a living thing." As such, it requires care just as all "living things" do. So, here are a few tips that, if used regularly, will extend the life and appearance of your flag.

But before delving into flag care tips,

I'd be remiss if I didn't mention that proper display is paramount. Refer to the page at <http://www.usflag.org/uscode36.html> for a complete list of display customs and protocol.

Now, back to the flag care list:

- Use a flag marked "outdoor" for outdoor displays. Not all flags are created equal; ensure you display your flag as recommended by the manufacturer.
- Choose the right size. Flags which fly from angled poles on homes are typically either three feet by five feet or four feet by six feet. Larger flags have specified flagpole height requirements. Keep in mind, the flag should never touch anything beneath it, such as the ground, the floor or water.
- Clean your flag. Outdoor flags may be hand-washed with a mild detergent, while indoor flags generally require dry-cleaning. Again, follow the manufacturer's recommendations.
- Take down your flag on high-wind days. High winds are extremely tough on flags and repeated exposure will eventually result in fly ends.

- Trim fly ends at the first sign of fraying. Flags may be trimmed as long as the overall dimensions are not noticeably altered.
- Don't forget the flagpole. Remove rust, and scale, which can cause permanent stains and destroy the fabric.

The average life expectancy of an outdoor flag is three to six months. After six months, even with proper care, noticeable fading will likely have occurred. This is especially true here in Hawaii. When your flag is in such a condition that it is no longer a fitting emblem for display, it should be destroyed in a dignified manner. Many Veteran and civic organizations will properly dispose of your flag at no cost to you.

Remember, proper care of your flag will not only extend its life but also prolong the intended patriotic effect. Long may it wave ... with proper care that is!

Flag Day is Sunday, June 14.

WARRIOR of the week

by Chris Aguinaldo

HICKAM AIR FORCE BASE — Team Hickam proudly announces Senior Airman Chad Gillenwater, an engineering journeyman with 15 CES, as our Warrior of the Week!

"Senior Airman Gillenwater is an exemplary Airman who continues to excel in every facet of his primary duties," said Lt. Col. Dwayne E. Thomas, 15 CES commander. "He was selected by his NCOIC to lead his section during his supervisor's absence."

Airman Gillenwater, a native of Reynoldsburg, Ohio, has been in the Air Force for a little over three and a half years, three of which have been here at Hickam Air Force Base.

He proudly proclaims he joined the Air Force "for the GI bill and to see the world" and said he's grown since being in the service.

"The Air Force has instilled in me discipline and respect and given me the independence I was looking for," he said.

He adds he enjoys being stationed at Hickam, saying what he likes most about his job is "the people I work with."

"The best thing about being here [in Hawaii] are the beaches and the weather," he added.

While the Civil Engineer Squadron can literally move the earth here at Hickam, Senior Airman Gillenwater said he's satisfied with the base. "I would change nothing. I like it."

But what he'd like to see addressed is how often Airmen are sent away. "The one thing I would change about the Air Force would be to reduce the deployments," he said.

Hawaii has made quite an impression on the Airmen, as he'd like to be in similar environments as he progresses in his career. "I would love to be stationed in Georgia or North Carolina because of the great weather in these areas."

The recent newlywed also hopes "to have a happy family with kids" in the future.

Lt. Col. Thomas said Airman Gillenwater already has a good start. "He is highly motivated and continues to exceed expectations. He is truly an inspiration for all Airmen to follow."

Team Hickam History

The Air Force’s most historic airfield

June 14, 1959 — The first permanent military chapel in Hawaii is dedicated at Hickam AFB. The cornerstone had been laid less than seven months before, on 30 November 1958, for the concrete block chapel with adjoining education wing, erected at a cost of $353,856.00.

June 15, 2004 — The 15th Airlift Wing officially closes Johnston Atoll on June 15, 2004. A yellow “X” was painted across the inactivated runway and a Hawaii Air National Guard C-130 transported the last remaining personnel to Hickam AFB. Today, only the birds remain.

June 16, 1969 — As part of Exercise Lepper Lapin II, Military

Airlift Command C-141 Starlifters begin transporting troops and cargo of Hawaii’s 29th Infantry Brigade on a round-the-clock basis from Hickam to Hilo’s General Lyman Airport. This marked the first time jet aircraft were used for inter-island deployment of Hawaii-based Army units. Previously, C-124 Globemasters had been used. More than 2,700 troops and 1,300 tons of cargo had been airlifted to the Big Island by 19 June. The 6486th Air Base Wing provided all ground support for this exercise.

June 17, 1914 — Battery Jackson is completed at Fort Kamehameha, with two 6-inch rifles installed, and is officially turned over to the Coastal Artillery.

Earth
Using the sun as a guide, we set out on a truly global journey while watching the movie “Earth.” On the way, we meet three mothers struggling to bring up their young. In the Arctic, a polar bear and her two cubs awaken to the first sunlight of spring. Half a world away, in the heat of the Kalahari, an elephant calf and her mother find water after a danger-filled trek across the desert. But they must share the pool with a pride of lions. For the final leg of the journey, we follow a humpback whale mother. She must keep her calf safe on their 4,000-mile migration from the equator to Antarctica. And so life on Earth goes on. A story played out billions of times a day, 365 days a year, as the Earth moves through seasons, every living creature bending to the power of the sun.

Model: Marco Rivera
Instructions by Airman 1st Class Katrina Plank, Asst. Fitness Coordinator and Certified Personal Trainer

Begin by standing on the flat side of the bosu ball with the ball side down on the floor. Contract the abs and maintain neutral alignment throughout the exercise. Hold dumbbells in each hand with palms up and elbows and upper arms at the sides. Keep the wrist straight as you bring up the dumbbells using only the lower arm. The upper arm should not move from its position. Slowly bring the dumbbells back down but keep a slight bend in the elbows so that they do not lock out. Perform three sets of 12-20 repetitions.
